

Monday, November 12, 2018

Leopard Nation

Natural History Museum

On the second day of the Louisville Middle School trip students who went to Washington DC, got to go to the Natural History Museum to look at different exhibits. In the museum, there was animal, crystal, art, and earth places for the students and visitors to look around at.

In one animal exhibit were arachnids, like black and bright orange striped tarantulas and also hairy spiders, large crabs, and colorful butterflies. In another animal room was old preserved bones of different kinds of undersea creatures and animals like monkeys. There was an fun area where the students could take a picture of themselves and there was options of what you could become, like a bear or a monkey.

In the crystal exhibit, there was geodes for sale along with them being created into little trees and knick knacks for the students to see. "I want to buy a crystal tree," A. said," but it is too expensive."

There was art from Africa and all different countries, styles, and ages. Included in an Africa area were huts and in them was of what they had in those early years.

In an Earth exhibit, there was different experiments using technology like creating a volcano and also of planets and space.

Overall, the students had a good time here and spent there time looking around with their friends, but students got lost to where they almost didn't make the bus in time when they were leaving.

-Hugo

Halloween Dance LMS

Students of LMS on October 31st 2018 may have been found at 6-8pm at the Halloween dance, to socialize or to show off their costumes! Student's were invited to come back to the school after hours for a price of 7 dollars if bought in school or 10 dollars if bought at the dance itself.

Students who attended were welcome to linger, dance, take pictures, or have snacks from the large table set up in the hallway between the gymnasium and the cafeteria. Some students could be found in the gym, dancing the night away. Others could have been found in the cafeteria taking pictures with the backdrop.

No matter what you preferred to do, you could also have just sat and talked with your friends. The dance appealed to most people such as K. who said, "It was fun, we did stuff." So as you can see, the dance was a success!

-Daffy Duck

LMS Volleyball Banquet

On October 5, 2018, volleyball players from Louisville Middle School gathered together for their banquet. The coaches, players, and parents came to recognize the accomplishments of the teams and individuals. Homemade meals were provided, along with deserts. Speeches from each coach started after dinner, Coach Beague starting first with the seventh grade team followed by Coach G with the eighth grade team. Each player was called by name as they were presented with sweatshirts, followed up with a speech of their achievements for the duration of the year. Each player was overjoyed when their name got called, going up up with gargantuan smiles on their faces, as parents and relatives cheered for them. The night was finished with the high school coach giving her speech, telling the girls what lay ahead in their future. The speech concluded with a burst of applause. The girls and parents got up from the tables and headed for the doors, to venture home. With grins on their faces, they couldn't wait till what the future would bring.

-Granny

The Bookfair

Louisville Middle School will host the annual Book fair November 5-9, Students can come to the Library from 7:30 am - 2:35 pm everyday and purchase your books.

If you enjoy fantasy, Romance novels, Horror, Fiction and more you should come take a look at the local book fair a pick out a copy of your own.

When asked about her feelings on the book fair I. commented "I feel it's a great opportunity for students to enrich their reading skills." However, when he was asked on his opinion of the book fair he was not as enthused as Isabella was, J. says "There aren't enough sports books and there are way to many romance novels."

Overall there are pros and cons to the book fair but if you like to read and are engrossed in the newest stories written by award winning authors then come on out to your local book fair and receive one of your own.

-Penelope Pussycat

Paint Me a Picture

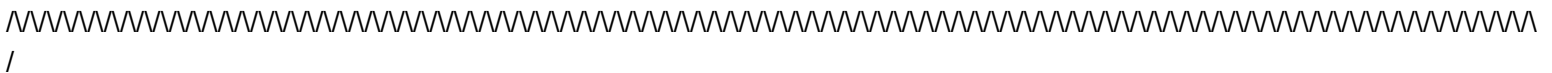

At the end of the first day of the D.C. trip, October 23rd, the 8th graders who stayed in Louisville gathered in the gym to play a massive game of paint me a picture. Black friday, wild, wild, west, and the extinction of dinosaurs were some of the themes the students worked with. A speaker from each group was elected to clarify the posed scene to the judges. All of the teams sprung into action after each theme was announced, eagerly organizing themselves into groups of angry shoppers, drunken cowboys, or deceased dinos. When asked about how she felt about this game, K. said, "That was kinda fun." However, R. thinks differently. "It was very unenjoyable," Ray said. The paint has dried.

-Witch Hazel

Veterans Day

On November 2, 2018, Louisville Middle School invited a group of veterans to speak to the students. One of those veterans was Neil Denzer. Neil recounted his experiences in the military, but one thing stood out: Neil was known as a prankster. For example, he was really enamored with putting things above individuals' beds, such as flash bulbs. The pranks were harmless and lighthearted, until he went a bit too far. Someone living with him at the time was deathly terrified of spiders, so Neil, of course, decided to prank him by putting a spider above his bed while he was sleeping. He woke up, petrified with fear, literally. He didn't move for hours, until Neil got back from the activities he was doing and moved the spider. Neil got huge consequences for doing that specific prank, but he'll never stop playing his pranks for as long as he lives.

-Road Runner

Jokes of the Week

Every morning I got hit by the same bicycle. It's a vicious cycle!

My girlfriend said, "You act like a detective too much. I think we should split up", to which I responded, "Great idea! We can cover more ground this way."

Two goldfish are in a tank. One says to the other, "Do you know how to drive this thing?"

Did you hear about the guy who invented the "knock knock joke"? He won the No-Bell Prize!

Last night I dreamed I was a muffler. I woke up exhausted!

Where do you learn to make ice cream? Sundae School!

